Confederate List Keeps Growing

Mrs. Vara Stanley, who is compiling a history of Appomattox County for publication just before the Centennial Commemoration, Anni 9, reports a response from dozens of individuals who are furnishing photographs and material for the booklet.

Appomattox men served the South in numerous companies, she says, including the following: Company B, 46th Virginia Regiment — led by Dr. William H. Abbitt and then by his brother, Dr. George W. Abbitt. Also Company H, 18th Virginia Regiment of the Infantry, Thomas P. Mattoon, Captain. Also Kyles Company, Heavy Artillery, commanded by Captain R. R. Kyle, soon disbanded with members going to other companies. Also Co. "C" 30th Battalion Virginia Artillery, Appomattox, Va.

"The Appomattox Courthouses," our Captain James E. Robertson and Company H, Appomattox County, under Captain Jerry Wood, who was succeeded, following his promotion, by Joseph W. Carson.

The National Park Service has a copy of the "Southern Historical Society", Volume 15, which contains the names of each person paroled at Appomattox Court House in April of 1865.

"New Look" For The Centennial

For "Southern belles" of yesteryear a little orris root powder in homemade salves and creams sufficed for make-up, but today's "Southern belle" readying herself for the Centennial of 1965 has a wide choice of lovely things to help her become even lovlier.

As timely as any such beauty topic, perhaps, is the fact that every recent "make-up clinic" at Patterson's Drug where Miss Sally McDonald. DuBarry cosmetics representative, gave a fascinating and detailed lecture-instruction to any number of teen and career girls, and homemakers.

Personalized beauty service is being continued by Mrs. Dorothy Paulette, a member of the Patterson staff, who reports that this new program of special help in cosmetics has been well received and has already proved of great benefit to many. With a "new face" and a "new Centennial gown", almost every young lady around will be ready to smile for tourists and news photographers as they visit here for a look at Appomattox of 1865.

Free As Air

Air is not FREE — at least not the "canned" oxygen which the Appomattox Rescue Squad uses to help heart attack victims and others as they are rushed to the hospital.

Capt. Kenneth Jamerson of the Appomattox County Rescue Squad, says that this kind of "air" costs a great deal. You are asked to give to the Rescue Squad so that oxygen can be replaced, and other vital supplies purchased for the saving of lives in Appomattox County. Simply address a letter to Rescue Squad, Appomattox. One dollar, five dollars — any amount will help.

"Indian Bread"

Frank Nuchols, farmer from Vera community, dug up some "Indian bread" recently, and divided it between Dr. Clyde G. O'Brien and Calvin H. Robinson for their separate collections of county items.

"Indian bread" is a type of fungus growth found on the roots of hardwood trees. The "bread" resembles real bread in that it is white, porous, and Mr. Nuchols' particular piece has the shape and size of bread.

This fungus is edible according to Pire Warden Dan Pierce and was used by Indian pioneers in olden times in their supplies of food. Some of the TIMES staff tried out the "bread" but didn't. "Get some of the County honey to spread on it," said Calvin Robinson, "and you will really have some breakfast brag about."

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Appomattox, Virginia under Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

Hermitage Guild To Meet March 11

The annual meeting of the Hermitage Guild will be held at the Hermitage, 1600 Westwood Ave., Richmond, Va. on March 11 beginning at 10 a.m. All Key Women of the Lynchburg District and an assistant are urged to attend. Especially those in this position; but the very fact that he is a member of the church an ordained clergyman by the church, a person called apart by God — this place upon his shoulders the task of serving these people in a way whereby they are conscious of God.

The chaplain may feel unworthy of the position — and most of the time he will — but here he acts on behalf of God ministering to the people.

He may read some fitting Scripture for the occasion. He may offer a prayer. He may read some poetry. He may administer the sacrament of Holy Communion, if requested to do so. He may simply encourage the patient to smile. He may quietly listen, as the patient feels free to talk. He may do a number of things, or what would appear to be nothing; whatever the occasion demands to bring this person closer to God. For you see, the minister is a spokesman for God. To this degree, and to this degree only, is the Chaplain as a minister different from the other representatives of God.

And so we see the Chaplain as a representative of God (similar to the others who serve) and as a minister (different from the others).

(The Chaplain's role as a member of the healing team will follow next week.)

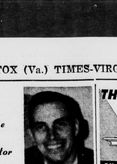
The Pastor Speaks



Rev. Thomas Waddill

Last week we discussed the Chaplain as a representative of God in the general sense that everyone represents God in his own way by giving his best day after day to fully using the talents God has given.

Today, we continue with the role of the Chaplain by seeing that in addition to being a representative of God generally, the Chaplain is seen as a Minister.

He doesn't wear a robe as he would in the pulpit. He has no desire to help lift the spirits of the people. There is no public singing of hymns in the patient's room. There is no reception of the morning offering. There are no announcements from the pulpit concerning the coming together of the patient and the chaplain as a minister — but one thing is present which is different from that of the other ministries of God which come into that room :ally in the form of nurses, doctors, aides, orderlies, etc. here is a minister.

This does'n mean he is any better than the rest of the representatives; but the simple fact that he is a Minister" opens up avenues left closed to the other people— He is responsible for helping each person become aware of the presence of God, the love of God, and the concern that God has for each one that every day. This responsibility is not necessarily sought out by the Chaplain— that is, he may not choose to be placed in this position; but the very fact that he is a member of the cloth, an ordained clergyman by the church, a person called apart by God — this place upon his shoulders the task of serving these people in a way whereby they are conscious of God.

The chaplain may feel unworthy of the position — and most of the time he will — but here he acts on behalf of God ministering to the people.

He may read some fitting Scripture for the occasion. He may offer a prayer. He may read some poetry. He may administer the sacrament of Holy Communion, if requested to do so. He may simply encourage the patient to smile. He may quietly listen, as the patient feels free to talk. He may do a number of things, or what would appear to be nothing; whatever the occasion demands to bring this person closer to God. For you see, the minister is a spokesman for God. To this degree, and to this degree only, is the Chaplain as a minister different from the other representatives of God.

And so we see the Chaplain as a representative of God (similar to the others who serve) and as a minister (different from the others).

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

Yes But . . .

Lesson for March 14, 1965

Nobody in his right mind would go deliberately against the will of God. Yet people do go against God every day. You have seen it done; you have done it yourself. How can this be? Are we all out of our minds? The reason why so many people do go against God's will and commandments shows unless indeed they are "off their rocker") one of two things about the matter. Either he does not believe in God really, or else he has some common but fatal wrong notions about him.

Commanded To Serve

Anyhow, Jesus told two parables that have to do with the disregard of God on the part of man. These are the parables of the Two Sons and of the Wedding Feast, with the difficult little postscript
